

Children's food preferences are respected

It may take up to 10 repeated exposures to new foods before children become comfortable enough to try and accept it. However, threats or bribes, to encourage children to eat may be counter productive.