Miss Aisha said she was offering the children yoghurt and apple sauce for afternoon tea as well as the stewed peaches on the menu because some children didn't like peaches. Can she do this?	No. She must give him what's on the displayed menu for the day. (Reg 80 Weekly Menu)
Miss Joanna says Jose can eat what all the other children are eating. They shouldn't have to alter the menu just because of his family's religious or cultural preferences. How do you respond?	Reg 79 says Services must take into account any specific cultural or religious food requirements for each child.
Mr Marty asks how they're supposed to know what to feed the children. Please respond.	Reg 79 says Services must provide food that's nutritious and sufficient to meet each child's growth and development needs. The Guide to the NQF references the Australian Dietary Guidelines and Get Up and Grow: Healthy Eating and Physical Activity for Early Childhood. There are also numerous State government healthy eating resources for ECEC services.
Miss Becky says she's been told every Service should have a water fountain outside. Is this correct?	No. Reg 78 says children should have access to safe drinking water at all times. It doesn't specify how this is provided.
Miss Jenna asks if there's a Reg about physical activity. Is there?	No. But Section 51(1)(a) says children's health and wellbeing must be promoted, and physical activity is one aspect of this.

The Federal Government's Fair Work website <https://www.fairwork.gov.au/> has a lot of simple, easy to understand information about employee entitlements as well as some useful templates. Each week we'll share information from the website.

This week we're reviewing annual leave. Fair Work have a Fact Sheet which we've attached to the weekly email. We've also copied it below, and then reviewed some additional information related to the Children's Services Award 2010.

Who should get annual leave?

- All workers, except casual workers, must get paid annual leave.

When should workers get annual leave?

- Workers start getting annual leave from their first day at work, even if they are on probation. Annual leave can be taken for any amount of time, including single days or parts of days.
- A boss and a worker must agree on when the leave will be taken.
- If a worker asks for annual leave, the boss can't just say no. They need to provide a good reason.
- A boss can direct a worker to take annual leave in some cases.

How much annual leave should workers get?

- Full-time and part-time workers get 4 weeks of annual leave each year, based on their ordinary hours of work. Annual leave accumulates gradually during the year and any unused leave rolls over to the next year.
- To calculate how much annual leave a worker has accumulated, go to www.fairwork.gov.au/pact.

How much pay will workers get when on leave?

- Workers are paid their normal rate of pay. This doesn't include overtime, penalties, allowances or bonuses.
- Some workers are covered by awards and agreements that give them extra annual leave pay called annual leave loading. For more information, go to www.fairwork.gov.au/awardsandagreements.
- Sometimes workers can choose to be paid for the annual leave they have accumulated instead of taking time off work.

What if a worker is leaving a job?

- Workers must be paid for any annual leave they haven't taken in their final pay. If a worker gets annual leave loading then it has to be paid out too.

Under the Children's Services Award 2010, if a service is closed during a holiday period other than Christmas employees will be paid their ordinary rate of pay. During the Christmas holiday period, employers may direct employees to take annual leave. Employees who don't have enough accrued annual leave may be required to take unpaid leave for up to 4 weeks. However, Services that operate for more than 48 weeks a year may require employees to take annual leave by giving at least 4 weeks' notice as part of a close down of operations (Clause 24.4).

The Award requires employers to pay a 17.5% leave loading (Clause 24.3).

Annual Leave in advance

Under the Award, employers may agree in writing to employees taking paid annual leave before they've accrued any entitlement to the leave. The written agreement must state the amount of leave when it starts and be signed by the employee or their parent/guardian if they're under 18 (Clause 24.8).

Excessive annual leave

Employers may direct employees who've accrued more than 8 weeks' paid leave to take paid annual leave. Employers may also be required to approve annual leave requests from employees with this amount of leave. You must follow the procedural requirements outlined in Clauses 24.6 and 24.7.

Cashing out annual leave

You may agree in writing to the cashing out of a period of paid annual leave. The written agreement must state the amount of leave being cashed out, the payment amount, when it will be paid, and be signed by the employee or their parent/guardian if they're under 18. You must ensure you follow the procedural requirements in Clause 24.9.
