

All aspects of the program, including routines, are organised in ways that maximise opportunities for each child's learning.

Section 1. We show you exactly what is required for this element to be meeting and exceeding.

First step: We must ensure the Law and Regulations are always met. Second step: look at the NQS and work through the process of meeting the element. Third step: then we can look at and complete the exceeding themes.

The logo above shows the effort required to do these three components. It should be easy and take little time to meet the Law and Regulations once you know what is required. Meeting then can become everyday practice, while exceeding takes a lot more time, thinking, connecting to families and community and practice change.

The Educators and Educational Leaders pages give you exactly what you need to be meeting and exceeding.

Law & Regs

There are a lot of Laws and Regulations that cover routines and transitions. They provide many opportunities to extend learning.

Looking at the element in detail - Element 1.1.3, educators must be able to:

- identify and act on opportunities to extend children's learning during planned and spontaneous experiences.
- use transitions and routines as learning opportunities – they're just as important as activities and experiences.

Evidence can be seen in practice, for example, educators use routines/transitions to teach children about safety, health and physical wellbeing. Educators use routines/transitions to teach life skills. Educators use routines/transitions as opportunities for children to contribute to or make choices about their learning and wellbeing. Educators ensure children don't wait long periods during transitions without engaging in play or activities.

Exceeding the NQS

Educators have worked with the educational leader to improve the room routine. For example, relating to

- lesson plans
- detailed routines

Embedded practice

We work with the Ed Leader to improve the routine. We have developed detailed learning routines that break down each educator's shifts into 15-minute blocks. We enhance this with visual routine cards the Ed Leader makes that allow educators to guide children through the routine. We embed lesson plans into the routine and each group has a folder with detailed routine sections. We developed this after critical reflection on a session that wasn't working.

Please note that the above in green can go directly into your QIP or SAT (NSW only).

Critical Reflection

Critically Reflecting - educators have worked with families to improve our room routine. For example:

- recognising family groupings
- making appointments for conversations about child's learning rather than at drop-off/pick-up
- changing meal/snack times
- changing child's rest routine
- increasing/decreasing physical activity at certain times of day
- collaborating with families to form behaviour-management plans
- planning routines/learning for additional needs children
- timing family involvement in activities/experiences (for example, mornings not afternoons)
- timing visits/excursions.

Critical reflection has changed our practice and include

We work with families to improve our room routine. For example, we developed behaviour management plans in collaboration with families based on their routines and our routines. We adjusted excursion times to better suit the children's requirements. We have increased physical activity at certain times of day to help children sleep at night. We adjusted afternoon activities & experiences times to ensure children could participate before early collection.

Please note that the above in green can go directly into your QIP or SAT (NSW only).

Families

Community Links

Educators use routines and transitions as opportunities for collaborative learning.

Examples include learning about:

- safety – road safety, stranger danger, risk assessment
- socially acceptable behaviour in public during excursions
- emotions and feelings
- health and physical wellbeing
- the human body – how it works and what it needs
- self-help skills
- sun safety, UV levels, and skin cancer
- healthy/unhealthy food
- sustainability and environmental responsibility

Exceeding – families and community We use routines and transitions as opportunities for collaborative learning. Daily excursions in the business park teach road safety, sun safety, UV levels and skin cancer, stranger danger, risk assessment, socially acceptable behaviour when visiting businesses, and healthy/unhealthy food at McDonald's. Visits to the mobility shop teach diversity and disabilities. Extended walking to the pond in the park enhances physical wellbeing and teaches environmental responsibility.

There are 7 things that you need to do with your service and educators.

- (1) Review the points from the Law and Regulations and make yourself familiar with them.
- (2) To help your educators learn watch this online video explaining why adult routines are important for children. Click below.

- (3) Add to your folder the daily planner so you can document and show the assessor how you are working with educators. Use documents provided in this section.

- (4) Guide your educators to ensure they are at the meeting level, use the examples in their section and the checklist to help you know exactly what is required.
- (5) Work through the 'Exceeding Embedded' theme sheet with your educators found in the 'Room Leader and Educators' section.
- (6) Ensure your service is connecting with families to create routines for children.
- (7) Work with your Nominated Supervisor and edit the QIP (SAT for NSW) template provided by Centre Support to ensure it is reflecting your service's practices.

Compliance test for educators

Instructions: Nominated Supervisor is to conduct the test. Ask one educator at a time in a location that other educators cannot hear or provide support to the educators being asked the question. Record the responses then analyse to see if the educators' responses would place you at risk of a fine. Finally, train the educators that fail to meet the regulations.

Exceeding the NQS

Embedded practice

Use the prompts below to ensure you are documenting your exceeding practice. I see many services that do great exceeding things but are not great at documenting them and when it comes to an A&R visit, they forget to discuss what they do. What is more difficult, is if you need to go to a first-tier review. It takes a lot of time and stress when you have to really look hard to gather what you need to prove that you are exceeding.

Our educators' curriculum decisions support Element 1.1.2 and connect to the service's philosophy. Select two or three points below and write your example.

Educators have worked with the educational leader to improve the room routine. For example, relating to lesson plans and detailed routines.

We work with the Ed Leader to improve the room routine. We have developed detailed learning routines that break down each educator's day into 15-minute blocks. We enhance this with visual routine cards the Ed Leader makes that allow educators to guide children through the routine. We embed lesson plans into the routine and each room has a folder with detailed routine sections. We developed this after critical reflection on a room that wasn't working.

All educators need to know exactly what is expected of them.

There was magical OSHC service that had two incredible people working there together for the past 30 years. These two women were so in tune with each other few words were needed as they did this magical dance in the rooms and outdoors with each other. They knew exactly what to do to make their shift flow. If one did a task, for example ran an activity, the other set the room up for the next experience. This magical teamwork flowed because they both knew exactly what was needed when working with the children. When a little mishap occurred, which it always will with children, the flow continued with the issue easily resolved.

Each educator could step in and do the other's job when required - no asking or directing. They just knew what was required, could sense all problems, and solve them before they even occurred. One time a child was doing something he wasn't supposed to. Facing the opposite direction, the educator, without looking up from wiping the tables, redirected the child who was about to climb the bookshelf to a more appropriate area. The child looked amazed as the educator appeared to have eyes in the back of her head.

Unfortunately, this OSHC doesn't exist in most services, especially with our high staff turnover, but don't fear, a proper run sheet for the room can make any service like this one. While a routine is a broad-brush stroke of the day, a run sheet breaks the routine down and assigns jobs to specific educators to ensure the routine is completed. Please note strict routines with exact times like this are not needed for everyone or every room. However, walking into a room where it is complete chaos because no educator knows what to do indicates the room requires a run sheet.

We all need to remember – no one is a mind reader.

Use Run Sheets to fix this problem. They provide a very detailed routine with everybody's role included.

This may seem like an over controlling system, but when everybody knows what to do they feel a sense of security which allows them to get to the next level.

Run Sheets let educators know exactly what they have to do and when. With the MTOP there is freedom to do what children want to do which is fantastic but I see people (particularly young educators) entering the early childhood sector without the skills sometimes to even do the basics. When the basics are not in place everything falls apart. A great example of this is when we transition children to the mat for group time. If no one is there ready for them with little pre-activities and songs it usually ends up as an unruly mess and children leave. What follows is the constant “please return to the mat everyone,” then children are dragged back to the mat in a noisy mess.

Step 1 Group Leaders develop a run sheet. This routine may have strict timing, or it might just consist of ‘things that must happen during the day’. For example, Kate the Group Leader needed a strict routine for her educators, while Tara didn’t require exact times, but required more of the things that must occur, especially when she takes her lunch break. These needed to include care practices for a child with autism.

Step 2 Break that run sheet down into main activities and support activities

Step 3 Assign a person to the main and support activities

Step 4 Display the run sheet and practice with educators

Step 5 Adjust as required.

Scripts

Scripts may sound like this

Kate: "I'm about to start homework corner. Let's look at our run sheet and talk about what's required. Eliza, tell me what you will be doing?"

Eliza: "I'll be looking at the strength trees, and Ava told us about the zoo visit. I'll investigate that further."

Tayla: "I'll keep cleaning up, but after that I'll work with Eliza and start outdoor games."

Connecting Runsheet's to visual routines

After reflecting upon last year, a Centre identified a few issues with their routines: educators wandering around not sure what to do, children not fully understanding the spoken language and an observation that educators were not always prepared.

Action from critical reflection

First, the Centre made 90 routine cards and then assembled different cards on the wall to represent the day's routine.

Educators designed the routines and transitions with children rather than for children, creating a sense of community. The children are becoming progressively independent, developing their knowledge and skills while becoming members of a group.

Routine in practice

5 to 10 minutes before a transition is about to occur three routine cards are placed on a board and taken around to show the children what is coming next. This method has become so popular with the children they are now conducting the transitions. As the year progresses, the children have started to select the routine they want for the day as well. Rivah is showing the children that statues and group time are coming next. Then he runs the transition and activities.

Parents are taken to the routine

Educator Zach takes the parents to the visual routine and discuss their child's day. Parents have commented that their child is running a similar routine at home, ensuring parents wash hands before dinner and conducting group times. Parents have started to discuss their work routine/schedule with their child.

Miss Claire says people talk about approved learning frameworks. She asks how people know what these are? Please respond.	The law defines an approved learning framework as a learning framework approved by the Ministerial Council. The approved frameworks are listed on the ACECQA website : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • MTOP (birth-5 years) • MTOP (school-age children) • VEYLDF (for Victoria birth - 8 years)
Mr Chris says there's nothing in the National Law that talks about delivering a child-centred program. Is she correct?	No. Section 168 'Offence relating to required programs' says educators must deliver a program that is: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • based on the developmental needs, interests and experiences of each child; and designed to take into account the individual differences of each child.
Miss Skye asks whether the learning outcomes in the MTOP/VEYLDF relate in any way to the National Law or Regulations. Do they?	Yes. Reg 73 Educational program says: "An educational program is to contribute to the following outcomes for each child— <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) the child will have a strong sense of identity; (b) the child will be connected with and contribute to his or her world; (c) the child will have a strong sense of wellbeing; (d) the child will be a confident and involved learner; (e) the child will be an effective communicator." These are the 5 outcomes for the MTOP/MTOP/VEYLDF.
